Jeff is building a custom theme based on the IBM WebSphere Portal 8.0 theme. He creates a hide/when scenario that suppresses the markup for a set of theme-based UI tools that are needed on most pages, but should be removed from others. To create the hide/when functionality, Jeff added page metadata named "suppress_UITools" that will disable the markup creation for UI tools for a page when set to "true". How can static template files in a WebSphere Portal 8.0 theme leverage page metadata from the active page?

A. When creating the custom theme, export the default theme from IBM WebSphere Application

Server, and add static template files into a copy of the default theme.

B. Use the `iWidget` wrapper for a portlet that inspects the navigation model for the current page, and apply a CSS class to the UI tools container to hide it.

C. Create a custom script file to include in the `co:head` contributions list, and script against the CSA API to retrieve the page metadata and apply a CSS class to the UI tools container to hide it.

D. Create a dynamic WAR for the theme containing a JSP that works with the navigation selection model to find the page metadata . Reference the JSP in the dynamic WAR from a `` tag in the static file.
