NEW QUESTION: 4

Which of the following statements about the use of the g debugging command is correct? (Multiple choice)

- A. Try to use it during the low peak period of network usage or when there are few network users to reduce the impact of debugging commands on the system
- B. Do not use the debugging command lightly without fully grasping the working process of the debugging command and the information it provides
- C. The debugging command should be used to find faults, not to monitor normal network operation
- D. Use certain debugging commands only when looking for certain types of traffic or faults and the cause of the fault has been narrowed down to a possible range. This can reduce the impact of debugging commands on device performance on the one hand, and on the other hand Reduce the output of a lot of useless information, which is conducive to more rapid fault location
- E. Because the debugging commands occupy different system resources in each output direction, depending on the network load, we should choose between ease of use (info-center console debugging command) and low resource consumption (info-center logbuffer debugging command) Out of balance

Answer: A,B,C,D,E
